with Blackboard.

Overview: Imagination refers to the capacity to mentally transcend time, place, and/or circumstance to think about what might have been, plan and anticipate the future, create fictional worlds, and consider remote and close alternatives to actual experiences. This multifaceted capacity emerges in early childhood and is fundamental to human thought throughout life. The study of imagination crosscuts traditional areas in psychology and extends into other fields as well (e.g., philosophy, literature). In this course we will examine how psychologists think about and study human imagination, covering topics such as pretend play in children, counterfactual reasoning, mental time travel, creativity, dreaming, and virtual worlds.

Class attendance and participation
The most enjoyable courses are those in which everyone comes to class well prepared and makes thoughtful contributions to the discussion. To enhance the quality of discussion, everyone should read the assigned material before the relevant class meeting. To encourage you to do so, students are required to write a one-page double-spaced typed reaction to the reading (critique, questions, etc.) that will be due at the time of each class meeting. Each reaction paper is worth 10 points. To receive the full number of points, the paper should provide evidence that you have read and thought about the assigned article(s).

You will also receive a score out of 50 for class attendance and participation. To receive the full score you need to arrive on time, be an active part of the class (i.e., not surfing the web), and stay until the end of class. Students sometimes miss class due to sickness or other reasons. The quality of your reaction papers and contributions to class discussions will be taken into account when assigning your grade for class participation. Thus you can make up for a missed class by taking an active part in other class meetings. On the other hand if you never speak up in class and your reaction papers consistently reflect a superficial reading of the material, your grade for this part of the course will be reduced. (150 points for reactions papers and 50 points for attendance/participation; total of 200 points).

Review Paper

Students will write a review paper in which they summarize the research findings addressing an important question about the psychology of imagination (about 10 pages). You will be given a list of possible topics, but you can also propose your own topic related to the study of imagination (these must be approved). Please schedule a meeting within the first 3 weeks of the quarter to discuss plans for your paper with Mirjam Staeb, the peer assistant for this course.

This course is designed to help develop your writing skills. For this reason, there are three deadlines associated with your review paper. Failure to meet deadlines 1 and 2 will result in forfeiting the points indicated below and you will not have the opportunity to receive feedback on your outline/draft.

1. November 1: Submit a first draft (hard copy) of your review paper to be read by another student. I will collect these papers, remove the cover pages with names, and then on Nov 3, I will pass out these papers (with no identifying information) to students in the class for written feedback. Thus, on Nov 3, everyone who turned in a paper on Nov 1 will be given a paper by another student to review. In the past, some students have turned in “papers” at this stage that were little more than outlines -- not finished enough to allow another student to edit and give feedback. You will not receive the full number of points if your paper is not a reasonable draft (at least 6-7 pages). In some cases, your paper might be returned to you and you will not be given another student’s paper to review. Note that the more complete your paper is, the more help the student will be able to give you. (30 points).

2. Nov 10: Submit your written feedback plus the edited paper (20 points). On Nov 17, I will give you back your own review paper, along with the peer review.

3. Dec 1: Turn in the final draft of your paper (100 points). Late papers will be marked down substantially; the exact number of points that you will lose will depend on how late the paper is and why it is late.

Projects

(1) Dream Project. You will be keeping a dream journal and completing an exercise designed to give you control of your dream content. (15 pts. for data collection, 10 pts. for commentary; total of 25 points)

(2) Creativity Project. You will be creating a character and monitoring your creative process in a series of writing assignments. Most of these assignments will be completed in class. (5 pts for each of 5 assignments; total of 25 points)

Grades

It is sometimes difficult for students to figure out what to expect for a grade in a course that has no exams, lots of little assignments, points for participation, etc. For example, students who come to class every lecture tend to expect to receive an A. While it is true that it is difficult for students to get an A without doing those things, students who do not do a good job on their written work will not receive an A in this course.

All work submitted in this course must be your own and produced exclusively for this course. No form of cheating or plagiarism will be tolerated. Plagiarism is the inclusion of someone else’s product, words, ideas, or data as one’s own work. When a student submits work for credit that includes the product, words, ideas, or data of others, the source must be acknowledged by the use of complete, accurate and specific references. On written assignments, if verbatim statements are included, the statements must be enclosed by quotation marks. Unauthorized collaboration with others on papers or projects can inadvertently lead to a charge of plagiarism. In addition, it is plagiarism to submit work in which portions were substantially produced by someone acting as a tutor or editor. If in doubt, consult the instructor or seek assistance from the staff of Academic Learning Services (68 PLC, 346-3226). If cheating is discovered on the assignments, then the University will be notified and appropriate action will be taken.

Accommodations
If one of the following applies to you, please see the instructor as soon as possible to make adjustments. You are strongly encouraged to contact Disability Services (346-1155) if you have a non-documented condition that creates difficulty for you as a student.

- Documented learning or medical disability
- Non-documented need for adjustments to help you learn
- On a sports team that travels this quarter
- English is not your first language

With advanced planning, adjustments are relatively straightforward. Adjustments at the last minute can be problematic and sometimes are not possible.
